

Obreda Winston:

We was exiting the highway, and a car ran into the back of us, as if we weren't there. He hit us at 40MPH. Put me out of work for about three weeks. I was in a tough position because of that accident.

Keith Marcus:

Most people, when they get in a car accident, number one, they're in shock. They don't know what just happened, because they are just minding their own business, doing what they do every day. And then boom, their whole life has changed.

Kim Long:

I was pulling out of a parking space, and then I'm starting to leave to exit the parking lot and this Mercedes SUV backs into me, full speed. And it was just horrific.

Keith Marcus:

Sometimes people are just sitting at a traffic light, and someone rear-ends them, without the other person ever hitting the brakes. Whether it's a huge impact or a small impact, people are just not expecting for those things to happen.

Danielle Sims:

It's a lot when you get into an accident. Knowing that Keith knew about the process was reassuring, especially for me not ever being in a situation like this. Knowing that I had somebody that knew what he was doing, and was prepared for what was ahead.

Keith Marcus:

When someone hires an attorney, first and foremost, they want someone to take care of the problems. And that means dealing with the insurance company. Dealing with the other people, who are not being cooperative, who won't return their phone calls, who won't give them fair value on their car. Who, basically, are offering them very small amounts for potentially serious injuries. They're looking for an attorney to take all of that off their back. And that's what we try and do. I always tell clients, "Look, your job is to get better. Your job is to get 110% back to where you were before the accident. Let me do all this nastiness of dealing with the big insurance company. That's my job. That's what you're paying me to do."

Obreda Winston:

He's just so caring, and compassionate, with his clients. That just meant the world.

George Naylor:

People often try to handle the cases on their own, thinking that anybody could do this. They don't need an attorney to represent them with the insurance company, but that's simply not the case. Oftentimes it's best to get into an attorney's office as quickly as possible, and to evaluate that attorney, based on their trial experience.

George Naylor:

We've all been litigating cases like this for many years now, and that experience really does help our clients achieve the best result.
